

IMPLEMENTATION AND IMPROVEMENT SCIENCE WORKSHOP

7 – 11TH JUNE 2020 – AMMAN, JORDAN

The Centre for Global Burn Injury Policy and Research offers the exciting possibility of an innovative workshop on Implementation and Improvement Science. This workshop is aimed particularly at health workers who have or are planning to set up a burn unit in low resource or conflict environments, helping them to put knowledge into practice. This intensive 5-day workshop will combine practical applications of implementation and improvement sciences with other essential health care knowledge and skills, offering an extremely useful package for applications at this stage of their career.

This workshop will provide an introduction to the fields of Implementation Science and Improvement Sciences – what is it? Who uses it? How to use it? These principles and practical case studies will give you the tools needed to use these approaches effectively in real life scenarios.

The workshop is specially designed for clinicians and health workers in low-and-middle-income countries and conflict areas and offers tailored information and case studies. There will also be attention for other skills needed when leading a health unit in low resource environments, such as leadership skills, lean & agile health care principles, systems thinking approach, patient safety, and health economics principles.

“The organisation and communication was superb. The selection of topics was excellent and instructors were all of high calibre.”

“The right population was involved. Topics were focused and relevant.”
